About seminar

Drug discovery is the process through which potential new therapeutic entities are identified, using a combination of computational, experimental, translational, and clinical models. Despite advances in biotechnology and understanding of biological systems, drug discovery is still a lengthy, costly, difficult, and inefficient process with a high attrition rate of new therapeutic discovery. Drug design is the inventive process of finding new medications based on the knowledge of a biological target. In the most basic sense, drug design involves the design of molecules that are complementary in shape and charge to the molecular target with which they interact and bind. This will help UG/PG students and faculties in the development of new drugs.

Objective of Seminar:

Understanding of all aspects of drug design concepts: genomics, bioinformatics, drug target selection, structural biology, molecular modeling, intellectual property and marketing.

The development of essential skills: Research approaches, methods, and techniques of modern drug design.

Understanding of the industrial practices of modern drug design technologies.

Providing an introduction to growth areas in drug design research, such as siRNA, stem cells, high throughput screening and scientific work flows

Indicate in 200 words how the programme has helped and beneficial for development of MP state.

Traditional and novel approaches to drug design and screening techniques and strategies are described, and the potential benefits of new technologies are discussed. Intense research activity is now being focused on small-molecule structure-based drug design, in which drugs would mimic the complex molecular interactions of natural proteins. The new approaches and technologies hold promise for dramatic therapeutic advances, particularly in the areas of transcriptionally active drugs and gene therapy. Rapid advances in drug design and screening, brought about through new technologies, may yield significant therapeutic advances and cost-effective therapies.

The seminar gave an insight and knowledge to delegates regarding the current needs of the drug design. A drug is a small organic molecule that either activates or inhibits function of a biomolecule like protein which are involved in disease and hence result in therapeutic benefit to patient. Essential medicines are selected with due regard to disease prevalence, evidence on efficacy and safety, and comparative cost. This seminar was an effort to optimize the resources and provide quality of care to the population in the state. It will also minimize over and unnecessary medication. Provision of good quality generic drugs will also reduce the out-of-pocket expenses of the population at large.
